

Not only are my husband and I opposed to the relaxing of rules regarding ownership of multimedia organizations, but the method in which the decision is being made smacks of constitutional violation. Let's not forget that we have just sent a lot of young men and women to fight and, perhaps, die to assure the freedoms which our country holds so dear. Those freedoms include our right to express our opinions and to have government and government agencies uphold the decision of the majority. As far as I know, the FCC is a government agency, NOT a board of stockholders with the right to impose it's own will.
